SOCIETY NOTES.

Tuesday afternoon, February 14, Mrs. B. F. Ackerman entertained her lady friends at her home on Hoxie street, the affair being complimentary to Mrs. Roy Sewell and Miss Smith. The guests of the afternoon were met at the hall door by little Princess Ackerman, dressed in dainty white silk. In the hall the guests were met and welcomed by Mrs. Ackerman, Mrs. Sewell, Miss Smith and Miss Sampson. Mrs. Sewell wore a costume of white radium trimmed in real lace. Miss Smith wore a red silk trimmed in lace with a touch of gold. Miss Sampson wore a costume of old rose color trimmed in real lace.

The hall was decorated in red hearts and ferns, while the parlor was brightened with red hearts daintily draped on curtains, the mantle was banked with red carnations, and a vase of red roses occupied a commanding position. The silver candle sticks contained red candles. The piano was draped in red with two silver candelabras with red candles on it, and a large vase of red roses was here too. The back parlor was a duplicate in color scheme and arrangements of the front parlor. The dining room was in white hearts draped across from each corner of the room, green shades on the chandelier, and the bay window was banked in ferns. The game for the afternoon was "42," and there were twelve tables. The score cards were the hand work of Mrs. Sewell and were done in water colors. The table markers were white and gold hearts with red pencils attached. Misses Sampson, Hearne, Darracott and Harris kept count of

The Floyds, magicians, who are to be the next entertainers in the Palestine Lyceum course, have arranged a program for this season consisting of tricks and illusions that surpass anything heretofore achieved in the field of modern magic. The mind-reading, or second sight act by Mohala, is a unique feature, being unlike anything of its class, an exhibition which not only affords amusement but at which scientific minds marvel. It is a gift, and successful imitation of her wonderful work is impossible.

HE "LIT A SHUCK."

Imposter Was Playing Deaf and Dumb Racket When Officer Showed Up.

Policeman Britton came out second best in a footrace this morning, with a man he attempted to arrest as an imposter. The man was playing the deaf and dumb game, and had taken in several sympathetic citizens before his game was broken up. He was circulating a petition which stated that he was a poor orphan, who had no ma and no pa, and that he wanted enough money to start a cobbler shop. It said he was deaf as a post, as dumb as an oyster, or words to that effect. It was a pitiful appeal, and one which caused a number to dig up.

Policeman Britton got to observing the man, and soon became convinced he was not what the petition cracked him up to be. He followed him into Lacy & Sadler's grocery store, and Mr. Lacy was about to put his name down for a few cents, when the officer made some remark that caused the fellow to suspicion that he was discovered. So he made a break, and ran like a racehorse, cutting it through the railroad yards, with the officer a close second.

However, this minion of the law lost his prey in the race because of the intricate windings of strings of cars, and through the agility of the pursued in getting around and between them.

DIVED TO HIS DEATH.

The Boy Broncho Buster Rode His Last Horse in San Antonio.

San Antonio, Texas, Feb. 17.—In the presence of 5000 spectators Oscar Smith rode one of Dr. Carver's diving horses, Powder Face, to his death this afternoon. The performance was being given at the baseball park and an immense audience was present. "The Girl in Red" being ill as the result of taking carbolic acid by mistake, was unable to ride. Smith, known as "The Boy Broncho Buster," an attaché of Carver's show, volunteered to ride the diving horse which leaps from a forty-foot platform into a pool of water fourteen feet deep. With him on his back the horse made a beautiful dive. The horse hit the water nose first, with Smith sitting gracefully on his back. The crowd broke into cheers as the horse and rider went under water. The horse came up, but no rider. The crowd stared horror stricken. After five minutes and still Smith did not appear at the surface, one of the employees of the show dove into the water after him. It was fully twenty minutes before his body was finally recovered. When taken out of the water it was found that he had a great bruise over his left eye, evidently caused by a kick from the horse. As Smith made the dive a local photographer, employed for the occasion, took the picture of his flying leap. Smith had been with Carver for several years. His act ordinarily consisted of riding a bucking cow. When "The Girl in Red," a Miss Lawrence, is indisposed, he had been in the habit of riding one of the diving horses. Dr. Carver says he had made the dive successfully many times before.
